Goethe's Mephistopheles (the devil) is a very complex figure, even the creator of the angels. And though he appears in opposition to God, he is a serious distortion of the Christian devil: He is portrayed as a being who invites the reader to face the multiplicity of reality. He certainly is not to be feared.

Testing, Lutzer has done a great job of unmasking the sinister aura of the devil to his role in our daily struggle to obey the Lord. What Satan wants from us - to be separated from the Lord, to be like him - is the opposite of what the Lord wants from us - to be with Him for all eternity and to be like His Son.

Job obeyed God and was rewarded for his obedience. In the end, God's wager with Satan actually achieved an incredible coup: He harnessed evil and turned it to good (cf. Genesis 50:20), and He transformed Job into the most effective servant of all, one who took on God's own redemptive character and loved his enemies. And this, in fact, is ...
