Silviculture and Management of Complex Forests Defining novel ecosystems in a tree plantation context.
For the purpose of this paper and the better management of tree plantations, we propose that they be seen as novel socioecological systems that are defined as “physical systems of abiotic and biotic components (and their interactions) that, by virtue of human influence, differ from those that prevailed historically, having a tendency to ...

The largest operational bioenergy plantation in the Benelux countries was first established in the spring of 2010. Then, over five years (2010–2014) a novel approach has been applied, managing the plantation of fast-growing poplar and willow trees as a short-rotation coppice in two-year rotation cycles.
